

Increasing the concentration of reactants slows down a chemical reaction because the particles can't move.